

EADi Membership

Join EADI – a network of 150 renowned institutes in Europe and play an active role in development research and training.

Promote your research, disseminate your work

Reach key players in the field of development research: EADI publishes your calls for papers, research papers, policy briefs and opinion pieces, training courses and vacancies on the EADI website and online EADI services. Our dissemination efforts also include the European Journal of Development Research (EJDR).

Contribute to the European debate on development

Take part in the scientific discussion at the EADI triennial conferences at reduced rates. Join one of our working groups involving researchers from EADI member institutes, or use your expertise to create your own working group. Join forces with other EADI members to get European funding for your projects in the framework of Horizon2020.

Network with European development players

Network with EADI members and key experts in the field of development at the EADI General Conference. Join the annual EADI Directors' Meeting, a forum that combines intellectual input with practical issues to be solved through collective action.
